Jay Steingold

Nominated by: EAC Long Island
Dispute Resolution Centers

Jay Steingold's long professional career in a variety of industries provided him with the ideal set of listening and decision-making skills to be an effective mediator. He began his volunteer career as a mediator/arbitrator after retirement when he was looking for an activity to complement his other neighborhood volunteer work.

Mr. Steingold has volunteered for 17 years with the Long Island Dispute Resolution Centers (formerly the Mediation Alternative Project) and has contributed more than 5,000 hours of valuable service to clients and the Education & Assistance Corporation agency that operates the Centers.

The Education & Assistance Corporation is a human services agency with 66 programs serving over 65,000 local residents annually. The Dispute Resolution Center in Nassau County benefits over 6,000 clients with services in the form of mediation and arbitration.
